"To be a tree you must be a root or a seed first" this statement could picture our life as a future educator as we take or face the process before going to the peak of our dream and that is to become not just a professional and licensed teacher but to be a successful teacher who fulfilled her/his purpose or calling in this what we call noble profession.

There are lots of experiences that we encounter as we had our observation last semester, but truly we can learn new things every day. In our a 3-day observation in West Central Elementary School II which I was assigned to observe Grade 2 Mabini section, I gained more ideas how is the life of a teacher and even of the students in a public school. In the class that I observed, the first thing that I noticed is that the teacher is making a way to catch the attention of her students, she used intrinsic and extrinsic motivation. The teacher is giving prizes to the students who pay attention and also performs best in the class, and yes it is very effective, but I realized that we should not practice always giving tangible prizes, for us to avoid spending money. Integration of technology is what I also observed in the class, the teacher applies the traditional and 21st century way of teaching, there's balance use of tools because the teacher uses flashcards, charts and television in teaching. Diversity of learners is nature in a class, the students have different intelligences and also they have different pace in learning. Despite of the differences, the teacher still do her best to cater them all. The school has the policy to have remedial for those students who needs to practice their reading skill and in this moment the teacher is also building relationship or connection not just to the students but also to parents because without there guidance the teacher can't totally fill the needs of students in learning which this thing can be seen in Code of ethics Article IX Sec. 3. Different strategies of the teacher to help her students to have progress are what I've also noticed, the teacher uses collaborative activity wherein they can learn to one another and also to make students not to always depend on others individual task are also provided. The teacher also connects her discussion on real world situation or what she thinks that the students already experienced, to tap the interest of her students. During this 3-day observation the thing that captured my heart and led me to ask if I will still pursue this profession is when I saw the different behaviour of students I saw how hyper they are, I saw their bad and good actions but the teacher is still doing her best to control them and make the classroom well. I saw how patient she is, not just to develop her students cognitively but also to mold their hearts. █

It is just a 3-day observation, but I knew the real situation in a class the process of teaching and learning. Every time I go home after our observation I always ponder and ask this question "Makakaya ko ba iyon?", can I do what my cooperating teacher possess. Truly, that this profession is not just a work but it is a noble calling. Yes it is not easy, but as long as you have a passion for it you will never get tired of doing the thing that you chose. These experiences enlighten me again how challenging the life of a teacher is, but it is also fulfilling when you knew that progress happened in your students. I have my shortcomings in our observation I came late 2 times and I am also struggling with other aspect of my life during our observation and these reflects the life of a teacher that you need to hide your weaknesses in front of the young people that you are leading to become strong and firm people. I encountered different experiences and I can say that these are the pieces that will mold and shape me to become a successful educator someday.
