

This is my first day as a observer in Juan P. Guadiz Elementary School. I want to share this memory because even if its my first time those students are so jolly. I really appreciate their love and also, they are so responsible when it comes to cleaning the classroom.

This is our second day in Juan P. Guadiz Elementary School. I really want to share this with you because, its my first time to wear the university uniform outside the school and to think, I don't literally wear uniform inside the campus.

This photo taken when they have their recess, they so kulit talaga. They also gave me food because that's their way on welcoming me on their school. And to say this, they are all smart even if they are talkative, the energy they have will surely give you vibes.

This is our last day in Juan P. Guadiz Elementary School. When I'm taken this photo, all I can say is I will miss them because after all, in three days that I've stayed with them, I understand, and I know their differences. I'm not there to judge of who they are but I'm there because I want to know what is their purpose as a individual.

All I can say on my Cooperating Teacher is I'm amazed! She knows how to handle the pandemic children. She is so passionate when it comes to teaching. There's a quote that she gave me "teaching is not a job, it's a vocation" because all you must do is to dedicate yourself in teaching. And there's a simple token that we gave to them as a thank you gift for giving us an opportunity to observe in their school/classroom.
