Being a teacher is one of the hardest profession of all professions. They spending so much time thinking what strategies they need to use for the next day and taking care of child of other people. They have much time with other child than their own family. I want and I need to see what is the life behind every teachers, how they can surpass and face those challenges on their everyday battle.

During my 3 days of observation a lot of experiences and realizations entered to my mind. How hard handle other people's child with different personalities, behaviors and attitudes. I observed in that school how they can greet and approach visitors just like us. They welcome us with warm greetings. Inside of the classroom where I am assigned in, the students greet me and I felt that time how happy to become a teacher. I assigned in a kinder class because the principal's purpose is for us to see how hard to teach lower grade levels. They are the one who will give the prior knowledge and skills that is needed by the students. I fell the enjoyment and very stressful at the same time because, every time that you are teaching, your students are doing their own business. I saw the patience and the perseverance of my cooperating teacher because she can handle the 2 sets of children. I realize that it's not enough that you have you build rapport with your students but also you need to make authority in the class for you can handle those different kinds of students.

There's a lot of positive things that I observed inside and outside of the school but I want to be more focus how reliable and passionate my cooperating teacher with her profession. First thing that I observe is that the teacher build a good relationship with the parents of her students. They are willing to help my cooperating teacher if she need something for the sake of their child. She also informing every parent what is the performance of their child and also about the things that needs improvement. How lucky those students have a teacher like her, she is willing to help for the development of every child. (Code of Ethics – Article IX section 1 & 2). I also observe that even she is in a kindergarten level still she is using learner centered approach. She let her students to answer questions with their own, she is good at constructing different questions for the students will answer the questions right. After that questioning she now let her students to do an activity and she will facilitate every students about their work. I also observe that during break time the students will tell the teacher if she can open the food for them but the teacher only guide every students how to open their own foods. (Code of Ethics – Article III section 1). Every time they had their breaktime, the teacher will playing music or story. She don't want to hear any noise but only educational noise. After that breaktime, the students will fix their selves at the center. They have that puzzle mat for the teacher will see who are the students that is listening to her and who are not. They have electric fans in the 4 corners of the classroom and the books and toys are well placed, for short the classroom is conducive for every student. (PPST – Learning Environment) Even me as an observer, I am amaze of what classroom they have. I also amazed on how she can handle her students because before they have their lesson, she will make her students alive by playing music to dance. The students feel that they comfortable in their environment and also with the teacher. The teacher also has a different approach, techniques and strategies on how she will deliver her lesson, just like their topic about community. She made a song using their topic about community. How creative the teacher is, for she can only catch the attention of her students to learn. (PPST – Content Knowledge and Pedagogy 1,3&7). I am so happy during that time because I experience to see how hard and happy teaching lower grades.

We will experience different challenges, battles and problems if we are in the field. There are times that we want to give up but always think about your purpose. We are not in the field to teach only different students but, we are teaching because we are making future of every students.
